CORGRESS

Congress adjourned at 11 o'clock last night, after having passed the bill appropriating $2,500,000 to the World's Pair.

On the whole the Fifty-second Congress has acted fairly well in its first session, although it has done some things it had better not have done and has left undone some things that it ought to have done. If it has not been as saving as some people might have wished, it must be remembered that most of its undesirable appropriations were necessitated by the action of its notorious Billion-Dollar predecessor. It has checked many jobs and has held the reins of economy with a fairly firm grasp. A few stupid Democrats were led into the blunder of opposing the World's Fair appropriation and making some not very creditable exhibitions in the way of minority obstructiveness. But it is not necessary to rebuke them, The fact that in the end they were compelled to abandon their talse pretense of "principle" and to agree to a half-price appro-

Inclosed please find $8, collected in aid of surah, trimmed black white and satin ribbon THE EVENING WORLD SICK Bables' Fund. This money was gathered by birdle Andrews, aged twelve years; Adelaide Adams, aged sixteen years; Matilia Siller, aged fourteen years, and the undersigned, aged thirteen years. We made an active house-to-house canvass, soliciting contributions from all we could reach, againing those whom we approached that we asked nothing greater Gas that they show appreciation of our efforts and a willingness to do something, if ever so small, to assist a worthy charity. In most instances we asked but for one cent, remembering that if we cared for the cents the dollars would are for themselves. Amounts received ranged from one to 20 cents. We hope that the sam that sowned d, though small, may prove of material benefit to the suffering, little ones, and that our mode or procedure is collecting funds, which has proven an agreeatle task to us, may be as an incentive to others, inserted with the spirit of so laudable a charity, who can if they will assist in swelling the tind. New Bedford Clam Chowder.

Put twenty-five clams into a half pint o water after washing them thoroughly. Set them over a fire and let the water boll: when the shells open they are done. Take them off the fire, remove the heads and leathery parts of the clams, and chop the remainder fine. Save all the clarn juice in the shells when the clams are taken out. Peel and slice six potatoes and mince two onlons, add a small slice of larding pork, six sea biscuits, pepper and salt to the taste, the clam juice, a pint of milk and one of water, half a grated nutineg and a teaspounful of celery seed, or a stalk of celery minced fine. Let this mixture cook slowly for four hours. Then add the clams, with two teaspoonfuls of Worcester sauce and half a cupful of tomato catsup. When the chowder bolls up once it is ready. Some cook edd two tablespoonfuls of sherry, but this does not seem to belong to a chowder, nor the sliced lemons that are sometimes served in it.

After the Blouse, the Bodice.

The blouse is being supplanted by a smarter kind of bodice. Here are two pretty models sketched at Peter Robinson's. The Spanish looking one is of black velvet, with vest and sleeves of accordion-plaited soft silk. It has a sort of bib, edged with lace, and lace frill at the eage of the sleeves. The sash is soft silk.

The other bodice is pretty, but no are very becoming to slight figures. The
